...ingly inclining war." A Hungarian spokesman said.

During the past 14 hours irregular bands of armed Serbian nationalists have been patrolling the Hungarian frontier, trying to provoke Hungarian frontier guards by shooting insults, even in some cases by crossing the border. The patience of our soldiers at the frontier is being taxed to the utmost.

Archduke Albert, once a prisoner to the Hungarians, has taken the lead in organizing relief for the refugees. He has announced that the 325 who crossed the border at Magyarsburg will be sheltered on his estate.

France Backs Yugoslavia, Italy Defends Hungary

By International News Service

Paris, Dec. 8.—France and Italy dramatically took sides today in the controversy between Yugoslavia and Hungary.

Both nations, through official spokesmen, expressed their abhorrence of political terrorism, but France solidly backed Yugoslavia in her demand for satisfaction from Hungary for the assassination of King Alexander while Italy defended Hungary.

For France, the spokesman was Foreign Minister Pierre Laval, who charged the assassin of Alexander was striking at European peace with the connivance of Hungary.

For Italy, the spokesman was Benito Mussolini, who alleged that Yugoslavia had peremptorily rejected the treaty of friendship with Hungary. The Italian foreign minister said that Italy was in the midst of investigating the causes of the dispute which was now flared into the open with repercussions felt throughout the world.

reference, the President let it be known that all American embassies and legations in the trouble zone and the principal capitals of Europe had been instructed to inform the State Department of any developments.

As armed forces are so few, the command decided the first stand must be made in a hill, would area about 15 miles from the border.

RUSSIA IN GOLD BATTLE

By Associated Press

Rome, Dec. 8.—Forthright conversation of all foreign credits held by Russia to the United States, was ordered today by the cabinet presided over by Premier Mussolini, in a final attempt to halt the gold hemorrhage from the Bank of Italy.

The cabinet ordered all banks, businessmen and private citizens of Italian nationality to turn over to the National Institute for Foreign Exchange all their foreign credit for which they will be given lira at current rate of exchange (about 85 cents).

At the same time the cabinet ordered those under heavy pressure to register with the Bank of Italy all their foreign currency, and currency bonds which they hold abroad.

The Institute for Foreign Exchange can then use these foreign credits instead of gold to pay for imports.

NEW THREAT IN GREW SNAP INQUIRY

Defying Department of Justice agents and police, who had not relaxed in their search for the would-be kidnappers of 17-year-old Miss Eugene Grew, Boston and Manchester subeds, a man believed to have made the original threat issued a new one early today.

He called the Grew home in Marlborough street by telephone and, asking for the girl's foster father, Randolph C. Grew, Boston banker, said:

"All your publicity doesn't scare me. I'm still active, so watch out."

Both Mr. Grew and the butler who answered the telephone declared that they were positive that the voice was the same as that of the man who telephoned a threat to the Manchester estate of the Grews on Tuesday.

Immediately after receipt of this call, the Grew family telephoned Boston police headquarters.

Clarence H. Higgins, chief of the New England division of the Department of Justice, was notified of the new menace. He rushed agents to the scene.

According to Mr. Grew, the family, including Miss Grew, was all asleep. He said the man who telephoned the threat to wait a moment and he called Mr. Grew on the telephone. The butler had just said "hello" himself, according to police, when the voice rang out:

"All your publicity doesn't scare me. I'm still active, so watch out."

With that the connection was broken.

ARRESTED IN SPEED DEATH SUSPECT

By JOHN H. NOONAN Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Greenfield, Dec. 8.—At least two and possibly six residents of the Northfield district have been under suspicion by state detectives in connection with the shotgun killing of Dr. Elliott Spear, headmaster of Mt. Vernon school. It was learned today as a secret inquest into the death moved slightly forward.

One is supposed to have turned the chapel clock at the school to furnish an alibi for a suspect the detectives here sought in vain in vain to name as the killer.

Another is alleged to have tried to influence a state witness to change the story he told investigators when it came time for that witness to repeat his story before Judge Timothy J. Hayes at the inquest.

LETTERS AD CASE

Because police have other witness stories and have discovered two so-called fraudulent Spear letters, the authorities have practically ruled out the possibility of a suspect being named for the murder.

The story of the changed clock came out at the inquest when 18-year-old Alfred LaRue of Melrose, a student who is working his way through Mt. Vernon, told of having written the letter which a suspect was at the time.

LaRue, who was not understood, said that the suspect excused himself at a time when the clock in the house said 8:20.

HANDS MOVED AHEAD

Later, by a strange circumstance, the clock in the house was discovered that the clock was wrong, that it was actually 15 minutes past eight when the suspect really left the house at five minutes after eight o'clock.

That the clock on the campus chapel was changed to correspond with the clock in the house was discovered the Monday following the inquest.

There was no inquest session today, but several witnesses had been examined for the resumption of the hearing on Monday.

ELSIE ROBINSON

Don't know why, but this seems to be the latest craze. Twenty-seven letters from them so far. All of them boasting about how they don't believe in God or in heaven and tell it much of anything else.

All right, Boys and Girls—go on and boast. If that pleases you. But as for me, I'm going right on believing in God and immortality and all the rest of these ideas you label "junk."

"But you can't PROVE there's a God," you cry. "No—and neither can you prove there isn't."

Now can I prove that life goes on after death? But, again, neither can you prove it.

That DOESN'T

There's No Answer

In fact, when it comes right down to brass tacks, none of us can prove anything. Free will—have we got it or haven't we? Do we or don't we decide our own destinies? Right and wrong—what are they? And do they matter? Is life anything but a free-for-all? Have souls—and a secret, unseen destiny? Or are we all only rubeless swine?

I can't answer those questions. Neither can you. There is to be sure—considerable testimony on the subject. But there is fully as much AGAINST as there is FOR. And you can make any test seem better or holy, according to your taste.

That's pretty much what it amounts down to, isn't it—a question of personal taste. One believes and one chooses to believe—and dips up one's arguments accordingly. That being so—I CHOOSE TO BELIEVE IN THE BIG SIDE.

Maybe you're right—Friend Atheist—when you say that there's only one life. But if that's so, why the hell should you wish to fill with ugliness and hate, rebellion and sin?

You put to rest, I'll match you with your flowers. I'll match you with your flowers. I'll match you with your flowers. I'll match you with your flowers.

Why pass 'em up then and go looking for absences? If we are here so briefly, as you say, all we have to do is make the most of it.

Courage Splendid

No God? Maybe not. No purpose or plan? But do you explain the loyalty of a dog—the markings on a butterfly's wing—the sacrifice of a poor father or mother, laying down their lives for their children?

Accident? Egotism? All right—have it your own way. But I prefer to think it's a sign that there's something larger and lovelier behind our human muddle than our own small greed for life.

No future life? Only these few years? THEN BLOODLY I'M GOING TO LIVE THEM AS IF I OWNED THE STARS! For here we face on which there can be no argument, lad—

Gloom and grief—if that's your idea of fun. But don't CHOOSE TO BELIEVE

IF there is no soul—TILL ACT ONE: No future life? ILL BET ON ONE. No purpose or plan? TILL MAKE ONE. No God above TILL BE ONE.

Mrs. 'Baby Face' Joins 4 Other Dillinger Women—in Jail

By Universal Service, Madison, Wis., Dec. 8.—CRIME DOES NOT PAY.

Three words spoken by Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone to Mrs. Helen Gillis, widow of Baby Face Nelson, were taken to heart by the 36-year-old, anaemic young mother here as she was sentenced to serve one year and a day at the Milan, Minn., prison for violation of her parole.

She was spirited secretly from Dane County jail last night to the federal prison.

Dropping her head and nodding absent, Mrs. Gillis heard Judge Stone say:

Asked if she wanted counsel, Mrs. Gillis said:

13 Billions Every Year;

Crime 'Pays' in U. S.

Since Dry Era RACKETS TAKE TOLL IN EVERY INDUSTRY

Jack Lall, world famous author and student of criminology, is one of the experts summoned to Washington by Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings to attend the conference on crime opening there Monday. Mr. Lall has written for International News Service his views on what this conference faces.

By JACK LAIT (Written expressly for and Copyrighted by International News Service, 1934.)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—From all corners of the nation, from many walks of life, men and women are gathering here to compose a conclave more extraordinary than any that has formed since our embattled forefathers assembled to meet the crisis of foreign oppression.

The Attorney-General's conference on crime is its formal designation. Back of it is a situation unique in the history of civilized governments. The mighty United States of America summons to its capital its best brains and stoutest hearts to draw a "Declaration of Independence" against an enemy, so powerful and so dangerous, that constituted and regular resources of resistance have been proven inadequate and inefficient.

The enemy is organized crime and racketeering, which today costs us in money more than all branches of government and education combined; the total yearly toll of which is between $12,000,000,000 and $15,000,000,000, far more than it would require to lift the depression; which costs human life every 40 minutes of the day and night—night and day, every day and night—and has raised our homicide rate to 74 per 100,000, more than 9 times that of England; which has cost insurance companies indemnities beyond $300,000,000 for hijacked trucks—trucks carrying legitimate merchandise over our public streets and highways—within the year.

President Roosevelt, in person, will open this epochal congress of officials and citizens on Monday evening. So vital is the cause that it transcends party lines, with Patrick J. Hurley and Henry L. Stimson, Republican former Cabinet members, sitting beside Attorney-General Homer Cummings, of the current administration. Speakers have been drawn from America's outstanding prosecutors, educators, editors, law enforcement chiefs, jurists, criminologists, soldiers and legislators.

A Sad Mistake

With repeal, the more picturesque gangsters of prohibition times have largely passed from the scene, and the casual reader may have assumed the comforting illusion that violence, extortion, paid professional murder, terrorizing by bomb and machine gun, have declined. A sad mistake.

Deprived of most of their opportunities for large profits from law defiance during prohibition, the vast horde of thugs and racketeers have turned not to the work, but to laying on the legal and upright businesses which offer far richer fields, and depredations against which strikes more directly at the average, orderly inhabitant.

Behind the racketeer is the gunman, and behind the gunman are the slyster lawyers, the chattering politicians and such police as stick out their palms for bribery. And

MOTHER FREE OF MURDER CHARGE

O.O. McIntyre

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

New York, Dec. 8.—Purely personal pliff: I can read the dictionary for hours, fascinated. Two beautiful women: Autumn and Calvary. Will Rogers. "I should never be cast in the movies without Stetson Fitch. Best remembered a creepy mystery story, "The House of a Thousand Candles."

A group with a ring in his ear once chanced me through a Missouri meadow. And the Wright brothers carried on where I left off.

O. O. McIntyre

Never met a Southern girl who didn't say "rhythmic." Or Eisenhower who didn't say "white." Noisy hotel in the world's Hotel Princes at Havre. Bloodiest ring battle ever witnessed: Ace Rudkin and Sammy Baker in Los Angeles. Even the umpire was dressed in a ruby red.

First New York correspondent I met was John Murray Albion. First Washington correspondent: Gus J. Karger. No one has begun to read the book "The House of a Thousand Candles" yet. Or spread out a thin talent like E. Phillips Oppenheim. I never tire watching Joe Packman, tramp bicyclist.

Thoroughfares

The waiter in a French cafe asked Johnny Ray at the Walnut street theater in Cincinnati if he would have a drink. Ray, when he replied "Yes. Kill me two of them and bring me a bowl of coffee."

I never walked through the forests of Fontainebleau without feeling I ought to pray. The most disappointing thoroughfare in Europe: Unter den Linden. One who never disappoints—Champs Elysees. Two cities I intend to see: Minneapolis and Seattle.

I once worked with a reporter named Donald Dunbar. What a name for a fiction hero or movie star!

ardent poker player was the late Dr. George A. Doney. Every time I've spurned for fancy engraved stationery, I've moved a few weeks later.

No actor yet has dramatized picking up his hat, gloves and cane so successfully as Adolphe Menjou. I always mistake Martin Beck for someone else. And I've spoken to Ernest Lubitch a half dozen times, thinking he was Harold R. Franklin.

Kitty Collier, at the London Savoy, were the first barmaid I ever fared. And to worldly I ordered a double stinger and rode out astraddle a cloud of something.

Choice for the season's most amusing play, "Personal Appearance." The only place I eat lunch is in Armenian restaurants. The most cynical of mankind—a veterinarian. I never read a novel other than "The Great Gatsby."

night I read "four against a score" and kept awake half the night. Nothing excites admiration more than a natural Back Bay girl.

Mrs. Anna Kane, above, 26-year-old Roxbury mother. . . . and her eldest daughter, Nan. . . . radiant with joy, in each other's arms. . . . after the mother was acquitted of a murder charge, in the shooting of her husband, Hugh, taxicab driver. . . . Mother and daughter were reunited after a separation of weeks. . . . Now Mrs. Kane is going to look for a job.

Odd Twins!

Each Wife Has One

EAST AFRICAN NATIVE IS THE PROUD PAPA

By Universal Service, Nairobi, Kenya Colony, East Africa, Dec. 8.—The proudest man in all Africa is a native from the Donyo Sabuk district of Kenya who has just become the father of twins—each child by a different wife!

Polygamy is common among Kenya natives but the coincidence of the two births on the same day represents a million to one chance, medical statisticians say.

The babies are lucky that they have different mothers, for twins by the same wife are regarded with superstitious horror.

A Blushing Bride at 13,

Asks Divorce at 14!

HUSBAND, 38, PROMISED HER "GOOD TIME," SAYS GIRL

Last summer's 13-year-old bride will be this winter's 14-year-old divorcee, if she wins her uncontested divorce action in Salem Probate Court.

Mrs. Frances L. Brancalone of Fort square, Gloucester, who married Tony Brancalone, 38, in Detroit last July, three days before her 14th birthday, has asked Judge Edward B. O'Brien to annul the ceremony.

She told the court that she married the 38-year-old machinist on a promise of good times and of pretty clothes and no more school.

Attorney Frederick H. Tarr, acting for Brancalone, said that although his client did not oppose the proceedings, he wanted it established that he married the child in good faith, believing that she was 16 years old.

Judge O'Brien reserved decision.

WHO'S JINXED?

Firemen Halt Dance for Wellesley Fire

Who put the jinx on the Wellesley Firemen's Ball?

The fire ladders were all rigged out in full dress, handkerchiefs and all, when an alarm rang.

Observing all the niceties of etiquette they paid a call at Fluke Hall, Wellesley College, and put out a small chimney fire.

Dr. Butler's Art

When Robert C. Bentley is the writing class he has the best of the writing class. I sit in wide-eyed adoration, when he writes. He writes like a man. Myra Loy has become the man's favorite. Fannie Hurst was ending copies of "Lost Horizon" to her friends before the hue and cry. Editor with the most distinguished handwriting—Ray Long.

Fifty post card vendors along the rue de Rivoli never fail to contact me. Fredrick named states Maryland. A far country I long to visit is the Holy Land.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler says nothing with more pomposity than any man in public. I once had a policeman restrain a friend in his eyes from driving a car late at night and he hasn't spoken to me since. Just a boy scout!

People who did too long: Raymond Hood, Will Rogers, Bainbridge, George Fitch, Victor Herbert, Philip Miller and Montagu. A poignant line in literature—Simul Depra's final entry: "And so I bet a moved to that couch, which is almost as much as to see me from driving a car late at night and he hasn't spoken to me since. Just a boy scout!"

MOORE STARS IN BASKET BELIEF

With the big Boston Evening American Christmas Basket show at the Mayfair in Broadway only a day away, another headliner was added to the cast of entertainers today.

In addition to Harry Einstein, the laugh-inducing "Nick Parkykas," of the air, now signed with Eddie Cantor, and in addition to Ranny Weiss and his RKO Gang, the newest addition, Lester Allen of Ziegfeld Follies, Great White's Scandals and other Broadway musicals will take part in the big show tomorrow night.

Allen is currently appearing at the Scoville Square theater, where his comedy is the hit of the bill. He will be at the Mayfair tomorrow night with his quick wit in fine working order.

And in addition, leading screen stars have sent their autographed photos to the aid of the party to the highest bidder.

CONNERY URGES 30-HOUR WEEK AT MEETING

By Associated Press.
New York, Dec. 8.—Assuring manufacturers he was mindful of their interests, Congressman William P. Connery, Jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee, today informed the convention of the silk and rayon industry he favors immediate enactment of a 30-hour week with increased wages.

Connery also stated his belief that the next Congress will pass bills for unemployment insurance and old age pensions.

Unable to attend the sessions, Connery prepared a statement which was read to the 300 textile men meeting here.

Treasury Favors Keeping Tax Up

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP).—The drive to cut liquor taxes has suffered a blow from the Treasury.

Substituting for Secretary Morgenthau in a radio speech last night, Arthur J. Mehlott, deputy commissioner of internal revenue, said:

"Some people think the federal tax ought to be reduced. Their argument is that this will stop bootlegging. My feeling is that we have made big inroads on bootlegging with the present tax rates and that eventually we shall come close to stopping it entirely."

Spencer, Dec. 8 (AP).—Miss Lena L. Carpenter, 70, a teacher in the Boston schools for 30 years, died during the night at her home, 38 Cherry street. At the time of her retirement two years ago she was assistant master of the Margaret Fuller School in Jamaica Plain. She also taught at the Hyannis summer school for many years. She was a native of Brookfield.

France makes the Russian agreement, regardless of the fact that French investors will never get any of the thirty thousand million francs, real francs, worth twenty cents apiece, lent to the czar.

Alterations made in the White House include installation of a private stairway enabling the President to receive guests and send them away without any review or questioning by White House reporters.

Nobody questions the President's right to see guests privately. And everybody knows that these guests will NOT include "high financial best minds" from the neighborhood of Broad and Wall Streets coming to tell the President what to do, and when to do it.

There have been such visitors at the White House in times past, many of them.

In New York is a tiny war, called by detectives a "long war."

Three Chinese were shot to death yesterday. John Wing and two guests. Three Chinese, who killed them, were running from John Wing's apartment, used only four cartridges. Our reporters often need the entire contents of a sub-machine gun for one killing. It is a pity such Chinese efficiency could not be used at home, where China has real enemies, carving up her territory.

Mrs. Garner, wife of the Vice-President, who lunched with Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House yesterday, proves that the line "men must work and women must weep" is all upside down.

While the Vice-President has spent his pleasant Texas vacation fishing and shooting wild things, Mrs. Garner "has had only one day off, and that was when she took her granddaughter, Genevieve, back to school."

Mrs. Garner, who is the Vice-President's secretary when Congress is in session, did not complain. She was only telling about it.

An inquiring alderman in New York discovers that ninety-one men working on "relief work," eliminating mosquitoes, were supervised by ninety-five bosses. On account of cold weather the ninety-one mosquito exterminators were laid off, but the ninety-five bosses were kept bossing imaginary exterminators.

The main thing is that money is being distributed by these methods, although they might be somewhat improved.

Dr. Paul S. Achilles, a psychological expert, says efficiency of industrial workers has been reduced by the "mental ghosts of fatigue and monotony."

The mass production job does not give an outlet to all of a man's intelligence and concentration, according to the psychologist, and the "semi-automatic processes" annoy and discourage.

Perhaps the thirty-hour week will help that. Plenty of jobs on full time, that would restore prosperity, would drive away the "mental ghosts," probably.

GLAMOUR OF A ROYAL WEDDING TOLD IN PICTURES

AND A PRINCESS IS MARRIED. This excellent photograph gives a vivid idea of the pomp and ceremony attending the marriage service of Princess Marina of Greece, and her royal husband, the Duke of Kent. The Princess in her fairy-book wedding gown was the attraction for all eyes despite the glittering array of kingly uniforms. Dignities from many lands crowded Westminster Abbey, as two representatives of royal families were married. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

A PRINCESS ALIGHTS FROM HER COACH—Princess Marina, of Greece, shown being assisted from her coach, as she arrived at Westminster Abbey to become the bride of the Duke of Kent, youngest son of the King and Queen of England. Thousands waited for hours to catch a glimpse of this modern royal bride. On scheduled time. The plans gave the minute for every move in the ceremonial program. Slogan of Soundness Urged by Dr. Kinsolving

BY ARTHUR LEE KINSOLVING (Rector of Trinity Church)

Living through the convulsions and catastrophes of modern civilization, we have inevitably developed fitfully feverish ways. Yet, if I mistake not the mood of the immediate moment, the people are seeking to discover some solid, steady basis of life for the long pull ahead.

For years we have been paying the piper for the unsoundness of our twentieth century living.

BY FORBES

This inspiring news comes from Howard E. Blood, president of a large refrigerator manufacturing company: Of 23,322 consumers sounded out a year ago, "31.3 per cent of non-owning families showed a buying intent." A similar survey just concluded among 23,013 consumers, "indicates that 46.3 per cent of non-owning families expect to buy an electric refrigerator in 1933."

People want automobiles—and are willing and able to pay for them. Chairman A. E. Duncan of Commercial Credit Co. declares: "Our company, with around $60,000,000 of installment obligations on automobiles has only about $25,000 over 90 days past due."

Washington bureaucrats please listen to Sir Charles Gordon, president of the Bank of Montreal: "If critics of the capitalistic system would look around in Canada and observe what private initiative is accomplishing everywhere, they would have to admit that it is doing its full part in laying new foundations of prosperity. Canada has moved forward consistently on the road to recovery. Among the reasons . . .

"We have not been so ready as have some others to seek a panacea in the control of industry or in economic experiments of one kind and another."

Next week Bethlehem Steel will deliver to the Norfolk & Western the first of eighteen most modern, letty day coaches, embracing air conditioning, indirect lighting, rubber suspension, rubber-cushioned chairs, reclining and revolving seats. "Pullmans for the proletariat," so to speak.
